COURT GETS DOWN TO LONG GRIND

With Opening Preliminaries Out of Way, Officials Start in Without Delay on Heavy Docket.

DAVIS JURY DISAGREES

After Being Out All Night Jurors Fail to Come to Decision and are Discharged.

it is stated that on the twelfth day of August in 1915 the plaintiff purchased a ticket on one of the defendant's trains to the town of Brownstown. "Plaintiff avers that the defendant did not carry him safely to said town of Brownstown and that said defendant when the said train was approaching said station one of its agents and servants in charge of said train called out in a loud voice, 'Brownstown. All out for Brownstown.' The defendant further says in his complaint that with other passengers he walked through the coach before the train had reached a stop and that while he was standing near the door through which he was to

HICKORY NUT CROP IS REPORTED GOOD

Many Are Coming to The Local Market And Are Bringing Good Price—Prospects Good.

MANY SHIPPED FROM CITY

Nutting Parties Search Woods For Hickories And Bring Back Quantities of "Shell Barks."

Hickory nuts are ripe, and the crop promises to be the largest and best for several years. Local merchants are buying them almost daily, any say that they are just commencing to come in in quantities. There are the small "shell barks," which are preferred on account of the thin shell and always bring the best price, and the large ones, which, although they are not so much in demand, are preferred by some on account of their large kernels.

Many hickory nuts are shipped out of this city each Fall, but shipments have not yet started. The local market price at present is from 75 cents to $1.00 per bushel for the shell barks and 40 cents for the large nuts. The poultry companies, who usually make the out of town shipments, have not bought any amount yet, but expect to begin making shipments within the next two weeks. There is a large demand for the nuts both in the middle west and eastern markets, and the supply is rarely ever equal to the demand.

Sunday was a big day for hickory nut gatherers and automobile parties could be seen to come to a halt whenever a hickory tree, conveniently close to the road side, was spied. Many parties went out especially to gather the nuts, and spent the afternoon in roaming the woods in quest of them, while others could not resist the temptation to pass by a loaded hickory.

Many who have gone to the woods recently in search of nuts have been surprised to find spring flowers instead, several bunches of violets having been discovered peeping up from under clusters of leaves that had been bitten by the heavy frosts of the week before last, and had fallen to the ground.

The beauties of the woods at this season of the year makes a nutting expedition well worth while even if the hickory trees do prove few and far between and many have felt the ground.

NATIONAL APPLE DAY IS OBSERVED

Free Apples Furnished Today by Ebner Ice and Cold Storage Co. in Keeping With Movement.

12 BARRELS OF JONATHANS MAKES TOUR IN AUTOMOBILE

Delicious Big Apples on Tap at Banks, Hotels and Schools on First "Apple Day."

Did you get your apple today? If not, you are loser to just that extent, because apples have been given away today in Seymour and nearly everyone has been munching apples. Fine big red Jonathans have been on tap at the banks and hotels of the city today and the school children were not forgotten either, a quantity sufficient to provide one for each youngster being delivered to each of the school buildings of the city.

The occasion is National Apple Day, and the sponsor for the local celebration is the Ebner Ice and Cold Storage Company, who this morning delivered a barrel of choice Jonathan apples to each of the banks and hotels and to the several school buildings. Callers at the banks and guests at the hotels were told to help themselves and they were not backward about so doing. The movement is a national one, and apples are being given away all over the country today, with a view to encouraging the eating of apples. Apple growers and dealers believe that the American people should eat more apples, the great American fruit.

The North Western Apple Growers and Dealers Association are responsible for the movement, which has spread to all parts of the country. The Ebner Co. are members of this association, and are among the largest dealers in apples in the state. At present, there are over 6000 barrels of apples of all kinds in the storage rooms of the Ebner plant here, and many more are yet to be stored.

Most of the apples held in storage here are Indiana apples and the impetus given apple growing in recent years in Indiana has brought it rapidly to the front as an apple state.

The following ode to the apple is taken from a recent copy of the North Western Apple Grower:

"Apple, Apple, call for apple Everywhere you go; Scrutinize the bill of fare, And if the apple is not there Call the landlord down with care. He will come with smiling manner With some over-ripe banana, Or a grape fruit sour as gall, Tough and hard as a base ball. Take no substitute, but grapple With the question—Call for Apple."

SEYMORE CHEMIST JOINS IN THE RUSH

Maurice Jennings Buys Quantity of Quinine Because of Recent Skyrocket Prices.

12 BARRELS OF JONATHANS MAKES TOUR IN AUTOMOBILE

Modestly Denies That He is a Quinine "King" or That he Bought Large Amount.

Maurice E. Jennings, a local chemist of state reputation, was heralded in an Indianapolis morning paper today as "Quinine King" of Indiana. Locally his friends have been addressing him as "Maurice 'L.' the initial, of course, standing for Lawson. The Indianapolis newspaper carried a story of how Mr. Jennings and Raymond Milburn, son of Attorney General Richard Milburn, seized an opportunity offered by the skyrocket prices of quinine to purchase a quality of this commodity at a low price.

Mr. Jennings has returned from Indianapolis and today modestly denies that he purchased any considerable quantity of quinine. The story carried in the Indianapolis Star today says:

Quinine recently joined the ranks of "war stocks," and the story of three days of frantic buying of the drug came to light in Indianapolis through the efforts of a young druggist of Seymour to "corner" as much of the Indiana supply as he could.

It is said that last Friday morning a call for quinine to fill a big order placed by one of the European belligerents was sent out. Quinine that day was quoted at 42 cents an ounce, it was said, and big Eastern dealers were offering more than $1.50 an ounce for all they could get. Agents of many persons in touch with the drug trade immediately got busy.

One of these agents, it is said, dropped into a drug store in Seymour last Saturday and he met there M. E. Jennings. He told Mr. Jennings he would pay $1.15 an ounce for all the quinine he could spare. Mr. Jennings couldn't spare any, for there was something behind the offer, he thought.

So Mr. Jennings came to Indianapolis Sunday morning and got an automobile. He made a tour of small towns in southern Indiana, buying quinine in behalf of a man who knew what was about to happen to the market. He was to get $1.25 for all he could buy, but he returned with only three ounces. Nearly everywhere he went, even on Friday, most of the druggists knew of the sudden jump in the price, and some of them asked $2.50 for the drug.

Since the opening of the war there has been a slight upward tendency in the quotations on quinine, but two weeks ago in New York it was only 34 cents an ounce. Then, it is said, came the order for an immense supply for one of the European armies. Immediately the price began to jump. When the story got out yesterday one report had it that quinine would bring $2.30 in New York. Others said last night that this quotation was high, but it is understood that the offer for quinine is likely to reach that figure very soon.

THOMAS TAGGART WILL NOT BE TRIED

Case in Marion County Criminal Court Dismissed on Motion of Prosecution.

EVIDENCE NOT CONCLUSIVE

Other Cases Continued by Special Judge Eichhorn Until First of December.

By United Press. Indianapolis, October 19.—Thomas Taggart, democratic national committee will not stand trial on the charge of conspiring to corrupt the 1914 election of Marion county. The case against him was dismissed today in criminal court on the motion of the state, for the reason that conclusive evidence against Taggart is lacking, said Prosecutor Rucker. Taggart was indicted with Mayor Joseph E. Bell, Chief of Police Perrrott and 125 others. Mayor Bell was recently acquitted by a jury.

Other cases pending were continued by Special Judge Eichhorn until December 1, because the court is congested.

No action was taken in the case of James (Bud) Gibson and Ernest Roeder, confessed conspirator. Their cases being continued.

"There seemed to be several cases in which the same action as that just taken by the state should be taken and it seems wise to give the state time to look over its evidence before proceeding."

MEXICAN BANDITS ATTACK TRAIN FROM ST. LOUIS

Two Men are Known to Have Been Killed and Three Others Reported Wounded.

By United Press. ## The safe milk for your baby

Because it is just pure, fresh, sweet cow's milk evaporated to the consistency of cream, then hermetically sealed and sterilized. Carnation Milk has a delicious, natural flavor—the flavor of purity. Babies and children thrive on it—should be properly diluted.

CARNATION MILK—Clean, Sweet, Pure—From Contented Cows—is economical—practically no waste. One small can is all you need to keep open at once—and that will keep sweet several days after being opened if kept in a cool, dry place.

Always the same high quality. For your baby's good, order a supply of Carnation Milk from your grocer today. Ask the Pacific Coast Condensed Milk Co., Seattle, U. S. A., for the Baby Leaflet, also their new cook book "The Story of Carnation Milk."

NEW HAVEN CASE OPENED BY U. S.

Government Counsel Charges Criminal Intent.

New York, Oct. 19.—Transportation in New England, as they were prior to 1890, as they were in February, 1915, and the means by which the New Haven railroad system had been made to grow from 529 miles to 7,500 miles of steam railroads in the twenty-five years, without counting the steamship lines and the trolleys were set forth, according to the theory of the government by Special Assistant Attorney-General John L. Betts in the prosecution of the eleven New Haven directors, on trial in the United States district court. Mr. Betts has not yet finished his presentation, which is the opening of the government case.

Summed up the contention of the government is that the criminal intent of the accused, as members or part of a conspiracy to monopolize all the transportation facilities of New England, is to be deduced from the way in which they went about their work.

Where no actual monopoly was gained, yet they intended to get one and under this theory the prosecution has begun to detail every one of the acts incident to the consolidating of 165 or more corporations during a period beginning in 1892, before nearly every one of the defendants had thought of going on the New Haven board.

ALLIES REPULSE TEUTONS

Make Unsuccessful Effort to Regain Lost Ground.

Paris, Oct. 19.—The Germans from all evidence, determined to undertake a counter drive against the French to regain their original first lines of defense, which they lost in the recent allied offensive in north France, made three strong attacks in the Artois sector, around Souchez, all of which were repulsed by the French.

In Champagne and in the Vosges as well, important infantry attacks by the Teutons are being foreshadowed by concentration of strong forces and unabated heavy artillery fire. An attack near Souchez was forestalled by a curtain of fire from the French artillery. The two official reports indicate that important actions may be looked for within the next few days.

Tries to Commit Suicide.

CARSON LEAVES CABINET POST

Crisis In British Government Imminent.

DISAGREE OVER WAR POLICY

Expected That a Demand Will Be Made on the House of Commons to Inquire Into the Conduct of the War.

London, Oct. 19.—Attorney-General Sir Edward Carson has resigned from the British cabinet.

No reason for Sir Edward's resignation has been given, but a full explanation of the differences between him and the rest of the cabinet is now looked for as inevitable. Moreover, there are few optimists left in London who hope any longer that the cabinet crisis, which has been imminent ever since the Balkan developments, were added to the question of conscription, can be staved off many more days.

The immediate cause of Sir Edward's resignation is generally believed to be a disagreement between him and others in the cabinet over the conscription issue.

It is expected that an effort will be made by a group in the house of commons to demand that a committee be named to inquire into the initiation, the conduct and the present status of the Dardanelles campaign. It will be a demand just like that, voiced in the Robuck motion during the Crimean war, which caused the downfall of the Aberdeen cabinet.

This, and other demands on the government in the commons are expected to bring the present crisis to a climax.

What really brought the dissatisfaction to a head was the diplomatic failure in the Balkans. It is quite well recognized that the diplomacy of the allies suffered a great handicap in dealing with Bulgaria and full allowance is made for this, but a storm of indignation was called forth by Bulgarians actual siding with the central powers.

Owing to the fear that the politicians had not made adequate military arrangements to meet the situation, as soon as it was known that British and French troops were being landed in Salonica, there came a great outcry that an adequate force be sent, a force large enough to make a victory over the Bulgarians and Austro-Germans an absolute certainty.

The government is being strongly urged not to wait to see what line of action Greece would take, or the number of men Italy might send to the assistance of Serbia, but at once to throw into the fight all available forces ere it is too late.

Apparently the public outcry has had some effect upon the government, but if the Salonica expedition should prove a failure, there is certain to be trouble.

The blame on all the so-called blunders is being placed upon Premier Asquith and Sir Edward Grey. Despite the restrictions imposed by the censorship pressure, public opinion is compelling the press to take the matter seriously.

PROBE AVIATION SERVICE

Congress May Investigate Signal Corps, It Is Declared.

San Francisco, Oct. 19.—Testimony so startling relative to inside conditions in the aviation section of the signal corps of the army as to warrant the prediction of military men that it would not be surprising if congress investigated the entire aviation service, was given before the court-martial of Lieutenant Colonel Lewis M. Goodier, judge advocate of the western department, by army "birdmen."

Two witnesses, both officers of the army and men absolutely conversant with aviation matters, testified that certain officers of the aviation section drew flying pay, or a 35 per cent increase of the regular pay for hazardous work, who could not operate aeroplanes at all.

FULL SECURITY FOR U. S. CREWS

Note to Berlin In Frye Case Now Public.

POINTS TO BE ARBITRATED

Safety For Crews and Passengers of Vessels Carrying Contraband Is Demanded by Secretary Lansing
Pending Action at the Hague.

Washington, Oct. 19.—The latest note sent by the United States to Germany in the case of the American ship William P. Frye, just published reveals that the United States does not regard "an opportunity to escape in lifeboats" as sufficient safety for passengers and crew of any American vessel destroyed when carrying contraband.

In the note, which is dated Oct. 12, Secretary Lansing expresses satisfaction that Germany agreed to the American proposal for a joint commission of experts to fix damages for the loss of the Frye, sunk by the commerce raider, Prinz Eitel Frederich, and concurs in the suggestion from Berlin that it is not necessary to appoint an umpire in advance.

In agreeing to submit to arbitration differences which have arisen over the interpretation of the Prussian-American treaty of 1828, the United States places on record its understanding that no rights are waived in the interval. Germany already has given assurances that, pending arbitration, American ships carrying conditional contraband will not be molested, but since practically every commodity of importance has been made absolute contraband, the value of the assurances is regarded by officials as comparatively small.

The American government holds that the treaty of 1828 does not permit the destruction under any circumstances of American vessels carrying contraband of any character and in its note insists that while the arbitration proceedings are in progress more security than is afforded in lifeboats should be given to passengers and crews on American vessels which the German naval commanders may deem it necessary to destroy for carriage of absolute contraband.

"Without admitting that the declaration of London is in force," says the note, "and on the understanding that the requirement in Art. 50 of the declaration that 'before the vessel is destroyed all persons on board must be placed in safety' is not satisfied by merely giving them an opportunity to escape in lifeboats, the government of the United States is willing, pending the arbitral award in this case, to accept the declaration of London as the rule governing the conduct of the German government in relation to the treatment of American vessels carrying cargoes or absolute contraband."

OLD WILL HAS BEEN REPLACED

Martha Washington Document Restored to Virginia Archives.

Fairfax Courthouse, Va., Oct. 19.—Martha Washington's will, which was taken from the courthouse here by a Union trooper during one of the battles of Bull Run and later found its way into the collection of the late J. Pierpont Morgan, was returned to the county archives with elaborate ceremonies.

Recently the state of Virginia sued J. P. Morgan in the supreme court of the United States to recover the historic document. Mr. Morgan suggested that it be placed in Mt. Vernon. Fairfax county folk, however, claimed it as part of their court records, and it was restored to its place beside the will of General Washington. The case against Mr. Morgan will be dropped.

DELIVER MAIL BY AEROPLANE

Plan Two Routes In Missouri and Illinois.

Washington, Oct. 19.—With the consent of the congress transportation of the mail by aeroplanes will be introduced in the middle west next year.

Two routes of sixty miles each have been planned, one entirely in Missouri and the other taking in parts of both Missouri and Illinois. The interstate route will start at Peru, Mo., cross the Mississippi river to Golden Eagle and Brussels, Ill.; detour westward to Beechville, on the Illinois shore and thence back to Peru. The Missouri route will cross a country without railroads.

It is planned to establish eventually aerial mail routes in the middle west, the west and the east.

Packing Plant Damaged by Fire.

Evansville, Ind., Oct. 19.—Fire in the plant of the Evansville Packing company here caused the loss of $3,000 and for a time the entire plant was threatened with destruction. It is believed the fire started by having too much heat in the building.

RECALL SIR IAN HAMILTON

British Commander in the Dardanelles to Report on Campaign.

London, Oct. 19.—General Sir Ian Hamilton, who has commanded the British land force in the Mediterranean since the campaign against the Dardanelles was undertaken seven months ago, has been recalled to "report."

He will be succeeded by General Charles Carmichael Monro, who commanded a division of the territorial force when the war opened. Until General Monro arrives at the Dardanelles, General Birdwood will command.

The withdrawal of such a commander as General Sir Ian Hamilton, who has had complete charge of the land operations at the Dardanelles, is the first event of its kind in the British army since the war began.

It was into this newly charged atmosphere that Juanita Holland and her missionary guide rode in the morning mists.

Good Anse Talbott was in many ways an inadequate ally. He was both narrow and illiterate, but he was earnest.

At last the girl rode resolutely up to her escort's saddle-skirts and asked: "Brother Talbott, hadn't you better tell me what it all means?"

The missionary lifted a face that was almost haggard.

"Bit means," he said, with no idea of irreverence, "that Satan's got both underhocks—an' God help this country."

Then he sketched for her the history of the feud and deduced conclusions from what they had both seen and heard.

She listened with a sickening heart until he changed the subject and told her that the Widow Everson, with whom she was to stop, had a sizable house where she would be comfortable.

At last the girl saw, still a long way off, a fertile little valley, where the corn seemed taller and richer than on the scattered coves. There, like a tiny matchbox, on a high level near which the wall of mountain broke into a broad gateway, she could make out a house. It was not of logs, but of brick, and stood in an enclosure that looked more like the Blue Grass than the mountains.

"Does ye see yon brick house nigh the gap? That's Bad Anse's place, an' over that across the ridge, three mile away by crow-flight an' a half-day's ride by their roads, is whar Milt McBriar dwells. Ye kain't see hit from hyar."

It was almost sundown when they reached the house of the Widow Everson, and at sight of the woman standing at the fence to meet them Juanita's heart took strength. This house was not of logs, but of undressed boards, with gayly painted window and door frames of red, and although two days ago she would have called it mean, she had revised her views enough to regard it now as almost magnificent.

The widow dwelt here with her two sons, and the trio, by virtue of great diplomacy, had succeeded in maintaining a neutrality throughout the strife.

The comforts of the place were such as must serve to give contentment where teaming is arduous and the mail carrier comes twice a week, but cleanliness dwelt there and homely cheer of a sort.

Before they had yet entered the house the girl saw a horseman approaching with an escort of several men who carried rifles balanced across their pommels. They came from the east, and though Juanita did not know who they were, she recognized the central rider, himself unarmed, to be a person of consequence.

He was tall, and under his faded coat his rather lean figure fell into an attitude of well-muscled strength despite his fullness of years.

"Evenin', ma'am," said the newcomer. "No, I hain't a-goin' ter light. I jest heered thet Brother Talbott was a-comin' over hyar, an' I wanted speech with him."

The missionary nodded.

"All right, Milt," he said, and the girl knew, as she had already suspected, that here was a second of her chief enemies.

"I reckon ye all knows what happened last night," she heard him saying slowly. "Hit war a pity, an' I hears that thet their Haveys are a-chargin' hit up ergin me. That's nat'ral enough, I reckon. They 'lows that I'd walk plumb across hell on a rotten plank ter de 'em injury. probation, it was only a matter of hours before the family capitulated, as people in general had a fashion of doing under the spell of her graciousness and charm. Jerry Everson, whom men accounted surly, for the first time in years brushed his shapeless hat and remembered not to "hang it on the floor," and Sim Woods nixed him into the misty woods at dawn and brought home squirrels for her first breakfast in his house.

In the forenoon of her first day she left the house and, crossing the tiny garden where the weeds were already growing tall and rank enough to hint of future ragged victory, she made her way by a narrow trail that led to the crest of the ridge.

Juanita was steering her course for a patriarchal poplar that sent a straight shaft heavenward at the rim of the crest, opening its verdure like a great flag, unfurled on a mighty parapet. She knew that up there she could look two ways across the divide, and that her battleground would be spread before her.

She looked to the east, and line after line of hills melted into the sky. She looked to the west, and there, too, they rose, phalanx on phalanx, to dissolve in a smoky haze that effaced the horizon. It seemed as if in a majesty of relentlessness they reached from sunrise to sunset, and so, as far as the locked-in life of their people went, they might.

She stood there a long while, and finally she saw, where for a space the road ran near the brick house, unshielded by the woods, a straggling little cortege. At its front rode a stoop-shouldered man in whom, even at that far distance, she thought she recognized the missionary. Behind him came a few horsemen riding in two squads, and between the squads crawled a "jolt-wagon" drawn by mules. She knew that the Haveys were bringing back to the frontier the enemy's dead, and she shuddered at the cold reality.

It may have been three hours later that Good Anse Talbott rode up to the Widow Everson's. When the girl, who had returned long ago from the crest, came out to meet him at the door she found him talking there with Milt McBriar, who had also ridden up, from the other direction.

"Anse Havey 'lows," the preacher was saying, "that he has done foached home the body of little Nash Watt, an' thet the boy was shot ter death a layin' in the la'rel a hundred paces from the winder whar Cal Douglas was a standin'!"

"I've done already acknowledged that," declared Milt in a voice into which crept a trace of truculent sullenness.

The missionary nodded. "I hain't quite through yit, Milt," he went on evenly, and the girl who stood leaning against the door-frame, caught for an instant a sparkle of zealot earnestness in his weary eyes.

"Anse is willin' ter take yore hand on this truce. He's willin' ter stand pledge that thet their Haveys keeps faith. But I'm a preacher of the Gawspele of God, Milt, and I don't low ter be no go-between without both of you men does keep faith."

Milt McBriar stiffened resentfully, and his brows drew together under his hat brim.

"Does ye doubt that I'll do what I says?" he inquired in a voice too soft for sincerity.

The missionary did not drop his steady and compelling eyes from the gaze direct. It was as if he were reading through the pupils of the other and searching the dark heart.

"I aims ter see that ye both starts out fair, Milt," he said, still quietly. "An' ter thet end I aims ter admonish ye both on the terms of this meetin' atwee ye."

For an instant Milt McBriar's semblance of calm reflectiveness slipped from him and his voice rose raspingly. "Did Anse Havey learn ye that speech?"

Good Anse Talbott shook his head patiently.

"No. I told Anse thet same thing I'm a-tellin' you. Neither Anse nor the four men that fetches ther body will hev any sort of weepin' about 'em when they comes acrost thet stile. Ye've got ter give me yore hand that none of yore men hain't a goin' ter be armed. I'm a servant of thet Most High God." For an instant fire blazed in the preacher's eyes and his voice mounted with fervor. "For years I've done sought ter teach his grace an' his hatred of murder ter ther people of these hyar hills. When you two men shakes hands on this truce I aims ter be standin' by with a rifle-gun in my hands, an' ef I sees anything crooked I'm goin' ter use hit."

The dark giant stood for a time silent, then he gravely nodded his head. "Them terms suits me," he said briefly.

The two men walked down to the fence and separated there, going in opposite directions.

A few minutes later Juanita, still standing fascinatedly in the doorway, was looking out across the shoulder of the missionary. He presided at the threshold with grave eyes, and, even after these peaceful years, there was something of familiar caress in the way his brown hand lay on his rifle-lock. Then the girl saw a strange and primitive ratification of treaty.

On either side of the little porch stood a group of solemn men, mostly bearded, mostly coatless, and all unarmed. In front of those, at the right stood Anse Havey, his eyes still the dominant feature of the picture.

Over across from him was the taller and older chieftain of the other clan. They stood there gravely, with a courtesy that cloaked their hatred. Out in the road was the "jolt-wagon" and in its deep bed the girl could see the canvas that covered its burden.

into their embrace. But he was not there.

In the quaint conversation of the Widow Everson and her sons Juanita found so much of the amusing that she had to school herself against too great an appreciation of their utterly unintentional humor. Though she was a "foached-on woman" to be taken on

As Bad Anse took his place at the front of his escort his gaze met that of Juanita. He did not speak, but for an instant she saw his face harden, his eyes narrow, and his lips set themselves. It was the glance of one who has been lashed across the face and who cannot strike back, but who will not soon forget.

This time the girl's eyes did not drop, and certainly they held no hint of relenting or plea for forgiveness.

But at that moment the head of the Haveys turned from her and began speaking.

"I got your message, Milt," he said casually, "an' I reckon you got my answer. I've brought back Little Nash."

"I'm obleeged ter ye." The McBriar paused, then volunteered: "Ef ther boy had took counsel of me, this thing wouldn't never hev happened."

Bad Anse Havey stood looking at the other, then he nodded.

"Milt," he carelessly announced at the end of his scrutiny, while the ghost of an ironical smile glinted in his eyes, though it left his lips grave, "I've got several horses an' mules down thar in my barn that we found hatched in ther timber when Nash an' his friends took to the la'rel."

Again he paused and studied the faces of the McBriar men before he went on. "One of 'em is your own roan mare, Milt. One of 'em b'longs to Sam thar, and one is Bob's thar."

He pointed out each man as he spoke. "Ye can get 'em any time ye send down for 'em."

The girl caught her breath and, despite her dislike, acknowledged the cool insolence with which Anse had answered Milt's plea of innocence. Milt replied only with a scowl, so Anse contemplatively continued, as though to himself:

"Hit's right smart pity for a feller to go out shootin' in the night-time

TORMEOHLEN—STAHL

The Wegan church, in Brownstown township, was the scene of a pretty wedding Sunday afternoon when Miss Della Tormoehlen, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Tormoehlen, became the bride of Edward Stahl, son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Stahl. The bridal party entered the church while Prof. Wente played the wedding march. The bride wore a beautiful gown of white crepe de chine trimmed in lace. Her veil was of white silk chiffon and she carried a large bouquet of white crysanthemums. Her bridesmaids were her sister, Miss Martha Tormoehlen, and her cousin, Miss Elizabeth Redicker. Miss Tormoehlen wore pink and Miss Redicker wore pale green. Following the ceremony an elegant supper was served at the bride's home to more than 150 guests. They will live in Grassy Fork township.

ITALY DECLARES WAR AGAINST THE BULGARS

Fourth Official Declaration Issued Against that Nation—Russia's Attitude.

By United Press.

Rome, October 19.—Italy to-day declared war on Bulgaria. This made the fourth official declaration of war against Bulgars. Italy was preceeded by Serbia, England and France.

Russia has announced that a state of war between the Russians and the Bulgarians existed from the moment the latter began fighting the Serbians, but a formal declaration has not yet been issued from Petrograd.

MOTHERS OF THIS COUNTRY have through all ages past and will through all years to come take care of the ordinary simple ailments incident to every family with their own favorite remedy.

In almost every home in the land Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is the recognized standard household remedy for female ills; thousands of American women owe their good health to it. Made from the roots and herbs of the field, it is a simple remedy in which suffering women may place perfect confidence. It contains no narcotics or harmful drugs.

ENGLAND FACES CABINET BREAK

Resignation of Sir Edward Carson

Believed to be Forerunner of

More Serious Trouble.

ASQUITH'S ILLNESS HURTS

Strong Pressure Being Brought to Bear to Prevent Further Resignations From Cabinet.

By United Press.

By Ed. L. Keene, U. P. Correspondent

London, Oct. 19.—Can the Asquith cabinet last? It was said today that there have been differences among the ministers concerning many of the gravest problems that have been up for sometime. Sir Edward Carson's resignation as attorney general emphasized them so sharply that many looked for the whole administration speedily to fall. Announcement was made today that Premier Asquith was so ill as to necessitate several days to recover. Of the genuineness of Premier Asquith's illness no doubt was felt. It was recalled, however, that just such a previous announcement was the forerunner of Del Casse's resignation as foreign minister in France.

On one hand strong pressure was being brought to prevent wholesale resignations by the ministers, as this would necessitate a national election and it was generally felt the present is no time for such a test. On the other hand the concession was widely made that an increasingly vigorous prosecution of the war alone can prevent such a development.

PRESIDENT CASTS HIS VOTE FOR WOMAN SUFFRAGE

Wilson Votes at Firehouse Booth Below Princeton Campus—Suffragists Confident of Winning.

By United Press.

Princeton, N. J., October 19.—President Wilson added one to the vote for suffrage in New Jersey when he cast his ballot in the little firehouse booth below the Princeton campus at one o'clock this afternoon. It was the first time in history that the executive of a world nation has taken his stand for the new and broader sphere of woman. Yet the event seemed almost unnoticed.

When the President walked into the booth today and voted for state wide woman suffrage, he thereby clinched the victory for the pros, at least, the pros say so. The anti's say they're not so sure.

The nation, particularly those eastern states of it which soon will submit the question to their electorates, is watching New Jersey today.

The New Jersey Women's Suffrage Association and the Women's Political Union of New Jersey, on one side, and the New Jersey Association opposed to Woman Suffrage, on the other after a campaign lasting years, rested their cases today.

New Jersey's decision, because of the President's action, is expected to have a marked effect upon suffrage votes in other states.

The Chief Executive voted in response to the ballot's inquiry "Do you favor the enfranchisement of the women of New Jersey?" "Yes."

Mr. Wilson some weeks ago gave great impetus to the campaign in New Jersey by declaring that he would vote for the amendment believing it would benefit the state. Agreeing with the Executive on the question are Secretary of War Garrison, and Presidential Secretary Tumulty, both Jerseymen, who have declared for the proposition.

"What to do?" asked Ned.

"Carry the scheme through for him. As a practical engineer, I think I see my way clear. And say, talking of us, 'the three B's, what do you think?'" went on the volatile Watson.

The Colonel has three daughters, and they are 'B's,' too—Bertha, Beatrice, Blanche. Fellows, I never saw such loneliness!"

Within a month Ferndale was electrified. Smart, able Watson Bross had played the two steam roads one against the other as to the proposed connection with Ferndale. He bargained so well that the Northern line agreed to pay half the construction cost.

Ferndale awoke from its lethargy. Business began to hum with the completion of the new spur, of which Watson Bross became chief engineer.

And then came a natural and happy mating. Three bright, pretty girls, three brisk, handsome young men. There was no clash. Watson took to Bertha from the first. Ned was attracted by Blanche the moment he set eyes upon her. Watson found an agreeable companion in Beatrice.

There was a great celebration at Ferndale the day that Ned Burton was elected its mayor. It was made more than attractive by the fact that a triple wedding ran current with the event.

BURTON'S THREE B'S

BY ADELAIDE MASON.

"One last toast—to the three B's!"

"Which ought to mean Benton's three bad boys, I suppose?"

A jolly cafe trio, each member laughed boisterously. Their designation as "the three B's" had not been at all creditably won.

Ned Burton had recklessly given the toast. Watson Bross had echoed the sentiment. Tom Bradley was silent. He drank with the others, but there was no jolly smile on his face. As the others were about to arise and leave the table, he checked them with a mandatory gesture.

"I've something to say," explained Tom. "It won't take long: Fellows, I'm through."

"Upon my word, he's in earnest!" cried Watson.

"Turned reformer!" laughed Ned. "All right, though. I'm sick of the dull routine they call fun. What have you to suggest?"

"I'll tell you," answered Tom readily. "I've thought it all out. The other day I saw an advertisement offering a weekly newspaper for sale at a little county seat. I'm going to buy it. I've a plan to make that step the means of boozing all of us."

And then, Tom Bradley entered into lengthy explanation.

"It looks to me like a plausible plot to steal the good will and fat offices of a commonwealth," noted Watson.

Behold, three months later, Tom Bradley installed in the position of editor and publisher of the sprightly, up-to-date Ferndale Monitor. He congratulated himself on his investment. His success was pleasing. His brisk genial ways made friends for him on every side. Within a few weeks he had got to love his work. He felt like a new man, for early hours and temperate habits were making that of him.

The expected summons came for Ned and Watson, one day. They had missed Tom sorely. Life was becoming dull to them.

"Tom writes that he can fit us in admirably," Watson announced to Ned.

"What am I expected to do?" inquired Watson.

"Take the business management of the Monitor. You are to see that it gets advertising and subscriptions. You're a good mixer. After a spell you will be eligible for a local office. Time will promote you: village clerk, mayor, legislature, congress, and so on!"

"H'm!" reflected Watson—"that isn't so bad. I'm willing to enlist."

So, one day Watson and Ned arrived in Ferndale. The latter set up an office as a lawyer. The former, incidentally, was secured as a working partner by Tom. The columns of the Monitor gave them a splendid send-off. Each week thereafter there came due publicity.

The village was isolated from rail connections. Two lines ran twenty miles apart and each ten miles from Ferndale. The Monitor began to speak of an electric line, a gas works, a new water system and other improvements.

Ned began to experience the thrill and revenue of having real clients. Watson was entranced with the variety of acting as a reporter. Work on the Monitor began to tell. One day Watson rushed into the newsroom office afame with some new and exciting information.

"I've struck it, fellows!" he announced with a triumphant chuckle.

"Struck what?" queried Ned and Tom in a breath.

"My level. My engineering ability has come to the front at last. What do you think? looking up particulars as to the fall crops, I came across a fine old place outside the town here owned by Colonel Hunting."

"I've heard of him. Sort of an aristocrat, isn't he?" questioned Ned.

"He's a fine old gentleman, with a hobby—to connect Ferndale with one of the two railroads. He tried the scheme two years ago, has the right-of-way, invested one hundred thousand dollars and stopped work because he could get no co-operation or encouragement. The minute he talked, I saw my chance."

"What to do?" asked Ned.

"Carry the scheme through for him. As a practical engineer, I think I see my way clear. And say, talking of us, 'the three B's, what do you think?'" went on the volatile Watson.

The Colonel has three daughters, and they are 'B's,' too—Bertha, Beatrice, Blanche. Fellows, I never saw such loneliness!"

WHY YOU SHOULD WEAR DR. REED'S CUSHION SHOES

Comfort

Your feet rest upon a flexible cushion which conforms to and fills every curve of your feet, and distributes the weight of your body evenly the full length and width of the bottoms of your feet, relieving the extreme pressure on your heel, ankle and toe joints, and prevents any jar from walking.

Fit

Dr. Reed shoes are scientifically constructed, the foot conforming cushion holds your feet as in a mold, relieving callouses, corns, bunions and the hot burning sensation of your feet caused by the ordinary hard-soled shoes.

Health

The soft fibre insole holds your feet in place and distributes the weight of your body evenly from heel to toe, and permits a free circulation of your blood through the bottoms of your feet, relieving excessive perspiration and restores them to a natural, healthy condition. The fibre insole is an absolute non-conductor of heat and cold and does not allow the dampness to penetrate through the soles, preventing rheumatism, pneumonia and other diseases caused by your feet not being sufficiently protected.

Every man who wears them is a walking advertisement. We carry three lasts, all widths and sizes, at $5.00 the pair. We are the sole agents in Jackson County.

NEW OFFICERS NAMED
BY BAR ASSOCIATION

Jackson County Lawyers Meet in Annual Session and Discuss Plans for Coming Banquet.

The annual meeting of the Jackson Bar Association was held in the court room this morning. The meeting was called to order by Senator E. P. Elsner, the president of the association. This was the time for the election of officers for the ensuing year and the following members were chosen:

President—John C. Branaman, Brownstown.

Vice-President—Albert Kasting, Seymour.

Secretary—Oscar B. Abel, Seymour.

Treasurer—J. Alfred Cox, Crothersville.

Following the election of Officers, Mr. Branaman, the new president, took the chair. The annual banquet of the Bar Association was considered and it was voted to hold it sometime during December. Mr. Branaman appointed Judge John M. Lewis, of Seymour, J. Ross Robertson, of Brownstown, and Thomas M. Honan, of Seymour, as the committee to make arrangements. The banquet will be held at Seymour and a definite date will be decided upon by the committee later. Before the meeting adjourned practically all of the members present delivered addresses, speaking of the aims and purposes of the association and urging a closer co-operation among the members.

STRIKER IS SHOT IN CLASH*State Militia is Helping Police At Nashua, N. H.

Nashua, N. H., Oct. 19.—In a fight near the plant of the Nashua Manufacturing company, where it was said a group of strikers attempted to hold up a train loaded with blankets, the product of the mill, Adam Raxavitch was shot and probably fatally wounded by a militia officer and several men and women were hurt.

During a clash with the strikers, the police were overpowered and a local military company was summoned. It was said no order was given to fire, but that one man, who persisted in breaking through the line was shot by an officer.

HIGH OFFICIALS TAKING TANLAC*Judges, Mayors and Prominent Business Men Try Premier Preparation.

Lexington, Ky., October 18, 1915—“I have sold Tanlac since the beginning of its introduction in Lexington, to the Mayors of a number of cities, County Judges, Circuit Judges, and to many of the most prominent business men and professional men in Kentucky,” said Wm. E. Stagg, the Lexington druggist.

“The demand for the preparation has been phenomenal. In all of my twenty years’ experience in the drug business I have never seen anything to equal it.

“In addition to the Lexington demand, Tanlac has been shipped from my store to Kansas City, Mo.; Colorado Springs, Colo.; Denver, Colo.; Memphis, Tenn.; Meridian, Miss.; Bonilla, S. D.; Pittsburgh, Pa.; Jacksonville, Fla.; Louisville, Ky.; Tiffin, Ohio; Cincinnati, Ohio; Columbia, Tenn.; Palm Beach, Fla.; Phoenix, Ariz.; Los Angeles, Cal., and many other points too numerous to mention. You may rest assured that every city in Kentucky also has heard of Tanlac.

“I can only account for the great demand for this preparation by the fact that it is a good medicine. That is proved by the numerous statements from those who have tested the medicine and are now convinced of its excellent merits. The public has evidently not been slow to appreciate the Tanlac merit.

“Practically $20,000.00 worth of Tanlac has been sold and distributed through my store within the past few weeks. Such a demand is most certainly unprecedented.

“My associations with Mr. Cooper and the agency for Tanlac have been very pleasant. I therefore take pleasure in commanding Mr. Cooper and his very excellent preparation.”

No Problem to Solve*By H. M. EGBERT(Copyright, 1915, by W. G. Chapman.)

Some men at the club had brought up the old problem of wife versus mother. Which should a man save, if he were struggling with them in the water? Then it was that Merrill told this story:

“Sotheby had been out boating with his fiancee, Evelyn, and her little crippled sister, Mollie,” he said. “I think that problem was still harder. Ordinarily, of course, his duty would have been to save his fiancee, but Mollie was lame—had been so from birth. She could walk, after a fashion, but she couldn’t have swam, and she was far too frail and delicate to swim for her life in such a tide as Eight Mile race.

“He knew Evelyn could swim like a fish, too. The girls were staying at North Cliff when he went to see them. He had met Evelyn a few weeks before, in town. He knew she and her sister were orphans. They had hardly a relative in the world. Sotheby had become engaged a week or two before, and he was madly in love with Evelyn, and the envy of all the other men who admired her dashing beauty.

“I think his predicament was worse. It was about half a mile to the land, and Evelyn could probably have made it. Mollie was helpless. Sotheby did not know what to do. He acted on impulse. He saved Mollie.

“He never knew how the boat had overturned. He was trying to bring the tiller around and let the boom go when they found themselves in the water, and clinging to the overturned boat, which was drifting rapidly out to sea.

“He saw Evelyn struggling beside him, and Mollie sinking. Quick as a flash Sotheby grabbed Mollie by the hair. He lost sight of Evelyn. He knew he could not save both girls, and he could not let Mollie go. Alternately swimming and treading water, he managed, in utter exhaustion, to get Mollie ashore. Then he fainted.

“He awakened in a fisherman’s cottage. Mollie was upstairs and doing well. The next day he saw her. He had not dared to ask about his fiancee; everybody knew she was drowned. To his astonishment Mollie seemed almost unconcerned.

“It was a tiny fishing village, and the tragedy, though it stirred the place, was not widely reported. After Mollie and he had recovered the girl gave up the little cottage and went home.

“You must let me come and see you, for Evelyn’s sake,” said Sotheby.

“He was rather astonished when Mollie resolutely refused. ‘I bear you no ill will, Jack, and I owe you my life,’ she said. ‘But I feel that it would be impossible after—what has happened.’

“The girl’s uncanny calmness shocked John. However, there was nothing to do but acquiesce. It was a year before he saw Mollie again. They met on Fifth avenue, and the recognition was mutual. Mollie told Jack Sotheby that she was living with an old aunt in an apartment uptown.

“That had been a hard period for Sotheby. He knew that his shadow over his life would deepen rather than disappear, as the years went on. And yet, strangely enough, he began to realize that he had not truly loved Evelyn. Their meeting and engagement had been rapid, and there had been no communion of tastes between them. It had been infatuation, and, in spite of the tragedy, Jack thought of Evelyn as an episode in his life, rather than his lost love.

“When he looked at Mollie he was conscious of a sudden awakening of interest in the frail girl, whose beauty had developed until she seemed a replica of Evelyn—less dashing, less vivacious, but the Evelyn whom he would have loved rather than the one he had known.

“I am coming to see you, Mollie,”

he said. And this time the girl did not refuse.

“Weeks passed. Their intimacy deepened. The girl was becoming very dear to Sotheby. At last the day arrived when he felt that the shadow which hung over them ought to be lifted.

“‘Mollie,’ he said, taking the girl’s hands in his. ‘I want to tell you, dear, that I love you. I want to ask you to be my wife. I feel that you and I have something inseparable, something that makes our lives one. It is Evelyn, and yet I never cared for Evelyn as I love you.’

“The girl looked at him, and then, to Sotheby’s amazement, she burst into passionate weeping.

“‘I can never marry you, Jack,’ she cried: ‘You do not know—Oh, you do not know, and I cannot bring myself to tell you.’

“‘But you love me, Mollie?’ he cried.

“He took her in his arms, and for an instant her head lay on his shoulder.

“‘Yes, I love you,’ she said. ‘But I cannot marry you.’ She raised her head and looked him frankly in the eyes. ‘Listen, Jack,’ she said. ‘I have loved you since I first saw you, and I have never loved anyone else. That is why I must send you away. It is because of Evelyn.’

“He could find no answer to make. He bowed his head and went away. It was another year before he saw Mollie again. Then he was at Atlantic City.

“He was seated in a secluded corner by the Boardwalk when he saw Mollie coming toward him. At first he thought, so striking was the resemblance, that she was Evelyn herself. Then, as he watched her, he saw Evelyn in the flesh, at her side, and, beside Evelyn a man.

“The trio were advancing toward him, and Evelyn and the man were engaged in animated conversation. Evelyn had grown stouter and fleshier; she was still the dashing beauty of old times, but the dashingness could not carry itself so well under that accumulated load of flesh. It was overdone, and the woman was obviously too artificial. The hair was too light, the eyes too dark. Sotheby stared. He could not be mistaken. It was Evelyn.

It was overdone, and the woman was obviously too artificial. The hair was too light, the eyes too dark. Sotheby stared. He could not be mistaken. It was Evelyn.

“Sotheby was not superstitious. He knew that Evelyn was at Mollie’s side, and he rose and followed them to their hotel. He watched them enter, and all that day he waited until he was rewarded at last by seeing Mollie come out alone. She walked, with her limping gait, along the Boardwalk until she came to the same place where Sotheby had sat that morning. There she sat down, and there he accosted her.

“The terror in the girl’s eyes almost unnerved him. She glanced at him fearfully, and saw that he knew all.

“‘You have seen her?’ she cried, with a quick intake of breath.

“Sotheby nodded. ‘Tell me the truth, Mollie,’ he said, taking her hand in his. And he knew then that, although it was not the same Evelyn whom he had loved, it was just the same Mollie who had been so dear to him, who had always been in his thoughts, night and day, since he had learned to love her.

“‘She is not dead,’ said Sotheby. ‘But—Mollie, tell me the truth, and trust me.’

“‘Yes, I will tell you the truth,’ answered the girl. ‘When you became engaged to Evelyn you looked on it as a serious matter. But to Evelyn it was just a joke, a summer flirtation. She gets engaged at least two or three times every summer. When you looked on it as something lasting Evelyn was—well, just plain scared. She liked you well enough to become engaged to you, but she never loved you, Jack. Why, Evelyn couldn’t love anybody. The man she is engaged to now is rich, and she will probably marry him; but she never intended to marry you.’

“You frightened her, Jack, and because she really did care for you in a way, she was afraid that she might not be able to help marrying you. And you were not a rich man, not rich enough for Evelyn. I didn’t know what she was going to do, but I knew that she was planning to do something, because she was mad with fear when you came down to North Cliff.

“You know she can swim. She told me afterwards—she sent me a letter while I was in the fisherman’s house, before you came up to see me. She had upset the boat, knowing that you would take care of me, because I could not swim. When the boat upset Evelyn dived and climbed out and hid behind the rocks. She waited there until she saw that we were safe, and then she ran home and changed her dress, packed up and ran away. That was to prevent your knowing that she was alive. She wanted you to think her dead, so as to escape marrying you.

“And you knew all that, Mollie? And that was why you forbade me to see you?”

“‘Yes,’ cried the girl. ‘And when I was living with my aunt I could see you, because Evelyn had gone West. But I dared not let you love me.’

“But I have always loved you, Mollie,” said Jack. “I love you now, dear.”

“He took her in his arms and kissed her. And this time they knew that there was no obstacle to their happiness.

“‘Jack, dear,’ said Mollie presently. ‘If Evelyn marries that man they will go West to live. You won’t want to see her again. Can you wait two weeks longer until I send for you to come to me?’

“He laughed. ‘I have waited two years, Mollie,’ he answered. ‘I think I can wait two weeks longer—for you, not Evelyn.’

CORN PRODUCTS REFINING CO.*Dept. R. X. New York*P. O. Box 161*NEW STYLE OF FOOTBALL BEING SERVED THIS FALL

Conference and Secondary Colleges Using Open Play More Than Ever Before.

By United Press

Indianapolis, Ind., October 19.—That a new style of football is being served to the gridiron fans of the state this season is becoming more and more evident according to a number of dopes today. It is believed that the state teams, both Conference and secondary, are using the open style of play more than ever before. This is in spite of the fact that exactly half of the Hoosier coaches are from eastern schools where the closed massed style of play is considered the ideal, or at least was until Western invaders trimmed a few of the eastern champions by use of forward pass, wide end runs, and punt formations.

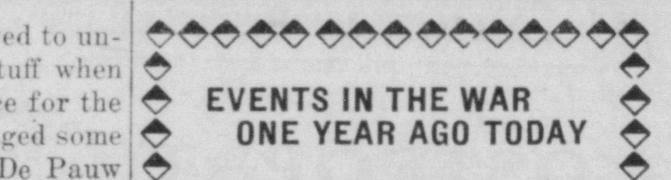

The news that Indiana teams are coming more and more to take rank with such pioneers as Iowa, Wisconsin, Illinois and Chicago in open field running is welcomed by the football public. The open style of play provides the thrills that make the game interesting. Whether this will stimulate a practically stationary interest in the sport in this state is a question.

It is believed there has been more change in Purdue style of play than in that of any of the other schools. Confronted with but mediocre material Coach Smith has to a large degree parted from the close formations with few forward passes. This was seen in Saturday’s game with Wisconsin. The game showed, however, that the Boilermakers have not yet mastered the forward pass.

In brilliancy and as a spectacular team it is thought Indiana ranks first among the state elevens. Last year while Indiana was learning the system of the new coach only straight football with the shift formations was used. Now that the fundamentals have been mastered Coach Childs has introduced the spectacular “L” shift and silent signals. The crimson has a repertoire of open plays of which only a few were used last week. A number will probably be sprung in the game here with Washington and Lee on October 30.

Notre Dame as well as Wabash may be classed with the pioneers in the use of open plays. Coach Harper of the Catholics in fact may be called one of the football missionaries to the conservative football east. It was through defeating the Army via the forward pass route that the east was awakened to the fact that the west had something on them, footballically speaking.

CLAY'S RICHMOND SPEECH. Wayne county was one of the Whig strongholds in the state. The Quaker element was strong, and with the rise of the slavery question as a political issue, many of the Quakers became abolitionists, bringing bitter feeling between them and the Whigs. Henry Clay, candidate for the president, addressed a monster meeting in Richmond in October, 1844. Just before he began his speech a committee of abolitionists presented a petition to him concerning his freeing his own slaves. It angered Clay and for an hour he flayed the abolitionists with sarcasm and abuse, ending by telling them to go home and mind their own business. The speech was widely circulated among the abolitionists and was the cause of Clay's losing New York and the presidency. After the election the abolition papers announced, "We are at home, Mr. Clay."

HELD FOR JEWELER'S DEATH

Two Men and a Woman Arrested For the Crime.

Chicago, Oct. 19.—With two men held on a charge of murder and one woman booked as an accessory, the police announce they have cleared the mystery surrounding the slaying of Harry Phillips, a west side jeweler. Detectives declare they have sufficient evidence against the three, and they will disclose it at the inquest over Phillips' body Oct. 26.

The two men held are Roy Atkinson, elevator boy in the apartment building where Phillips lived, and Patrick Moriarity, a chauffeur. Elsie Burke, a waitress, was held as an accessory. Robbery is believed to have been the motive for the crime.

SOUL SALVATION IS THE GREATEST WORK
Evangelist Davies Will Speak on "Why Gospel Fails" At Christian Church Tonight.

Evangelist Davies at the Central Christian Church last night spoke on "The Supreme Labor."

Working out one's own salvation is the greatest work according to the Rev. Mr. Davies. Agricultural, mechanical, medical work, each is of great necessity, but the work in soul salvation, being for eternity, is therefore greater.

Cynical men may talk about "brothers-in-law," about belonging to the "big church," about sending a good representation, but these fall flat as the apostle's injunction is heard "Work out your own salvation."

"Why the Gospel Fails" will be tonight's theme.

MARSHAL'S ASSAILANT HELD

Attack On Waveland Officer Alleged to Be Due to Grudge.

Crawfordsville, Ind., Oct. 19.—Abraham Courtney of Waveland is in the county jail here, pending the outcome of injuries received by William A. McCall, marshal at Waveland. McCall is in the Culver hospital here. He may die. The grand jury will be asked to investigate the affair.

Courtney is an ex-saloon keeper. He has been arrested a number of times. It is alleged he crept up behind McCall and struck him on the head with a heavy club, felling the marshal. He then kicked him in the head, it is alleged. One of McCall's ears is almost torn off.

Prosecutor Lin declares Courtney and the marshal have been enemies a long time and that Courtney often has threatened harm to McCall.

A JUNGLE MEETING

By FRANK FILSON.

Jim Sayres had drifted into the rubber camp in the worst stage of Amazon jungle fever. During the lucid intervals Harry Treves, the manager, and son of the millionaire president of the company, had learned that Jim had traveled a thousand miles up the river alone, after his natives had deserted him. He had gone through incredible hardships. Worst of all, he had lost that desire to live which is the best prognostication of recovery.

Harry had spent two years out in the jungle. His father had insisted on that before he went home to marry Ethel and settle down.

Ethel was the daughter of his father's old business partner. The marriage had been "arranged," as the newspapers say.

However, Harry was not to go home as had been planned. The company had other interests in Peru. Harry was to go to Lima as manager there, and Ethel was to meet him.

But Harry could not leave Jim Sayres, wanderer and stranger though he was.

In the fever which followed the delirium he listened to Jim's ravings. There had been a woman in his life, Harry gathered. She had been rich, and he had gone away, five years before, to make his fortune and to return and claim her. He had wandered through Brazil and the Argentine, up and down—but he had never begun to make his fortune.

On the fifth night the camp doctor shook his head.

"The crisis has arrived," he said. "He is not so ill, but he does not want to live."

"It's that woman!" said Harry, hotly.

"There's no hope," said the doctor. "He's slipping downhill."

Harry went into the sick man's room. Jim Sayres lay motionless among the pillows; his face was deathly white and his thin hands almost transparent.

It was evident that he was sunk in the final stupor.

A file of natives appeared along a path that led down from the mountains. It was a small party of bearers, proceeding toward the camp.

The natives, grunting, deposited their loads in the clearing. Four, bearing a hooded stretcher, came to a halt and set down their burden. Out stepped a white woman—Ethel!

She threw herself into Harry's arms. "I thought I would come on from Lima, Harry," she explained. "They told me that you might be delayed here for an indefinite time, and I didn't want to wait, Harry."

"I should have started a day or two ago, only there is a sick man here—a stranger, poor fellow, and I couldn't leave him."

"Where is he, Harry?" asked Ethel. "In that tent. But I am afraid it is all up with the poor chap. He is dying of jungle fever. His name's Sayres—Jim Sayres."

The girl released herself from her lover's embrace and, when she spoke, her voice was curiously restrained.

"Let me see him, Harry. Perhaps I can do something for him."

"The doctor says there is no hope," answered Harry. But already Ethel was walking quickly toward the tent. Harry waited.

But after a half hour he became alarmed. Ethel was still in the tent. He went softly toward it. He heard the sound of voices, and stood outside, not venturing to raise the flap.

And it was Sayres who was speaking.

"I shall live, dearest," he said, "because I have seen your face again. Ethel, how I have loved you all these years!"

"And I you, Jim," Harry heard her answer, and the man's face turned to a graven mask.

"But why did you become engaged to—you have not told me his name, Ethel, but why did you?"

"You didn't write. I thought you had forgotten me."

"I had no right to write to you," said Sayres in a quiet voice, subdued by weakness. "I only hoped your love was true."
